Bonus if we all agree

THIS PROJECT SPECIFIC
After the project is finished in a generic way i can if agreed potentially reach out for sponsorship of the project by the likes of MSI, Acer and such.
If we get sponsorship the value gained will be documented and evenly shared between the people who got involved.

ANY IDEA WE GO WITH
I might also be able to wing some big names into helping promote the game as its free game for people to play, the likes of john romero(doom), colin porch(head over heels), brian colins(rampage) plus a fair few others.

|-------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Royalty-Free (Commercial Use Allowed)                 | ✓ Yes                        | You pay once or get it free, then can use it in your game. Check if attribution is required. |
| Creative Commons (CC)                                 | ⚠ Sometimes                  | Only CC-BY and CC-BY-SA allow commercial use. Avoid CC-BY-NC (non-commercial).               |
| Public Domain / CCO                                   | ✓ Yes                        | Completely free to use, modify, and distribute.                                              |
| Purchased License (e.g., AudioJungle, Epidemic Sound) | ✓ Yes                        | You must buy the correct tier (often "game" or "interactive media").                         |
| Stock Library (e.g., Freesound.org)                   | ⚠ Depends                    | Always check each file's license — some are non-commercial or require attribution.           |
| Copyrighted Music (e.g., pop songs)                   | ✗ No                         | You need explicit permission or a sync license — usually expensive.                          |

These are the safest possible sources. CCO means: You can use it commercially, modify it, redistribute it, and you don't need attribution.

- Pixabay Audio (CC0)
- Massive library of music and sound effects
  - 100% free
  - No attribution required
  - Safe for commercial games
- Mixkit (CC0-style license)
- Free music and SFX
  - License allows commercial use
  - No attribution required
  - Cannot redistribute the raw files (but using them in your game is fine)
- OpenGameArt (filter for CC0)
  - Many CC0 sound effects and music tracks
  - Also contains CC-BY and CC-BY-SA (check each file)
- FreeSound (filter for CC0 only)
  - Huge library
  - Must filter by License: Creative Commons 0
  - Other licenses on Freesound may be non-commercial or require attribution
- Sonniss GDC Audio Bundles (Commercial-friendly license)
- Released every year during GDC
- Thousands of high-quality SFX
- License allows commercial use in games

these are some but you have to fine tooth comb them to find if they are free to use royalty free and without crediting. its a minefield lol

- CC0 = always safe
- Royalty-free commercial license = safe
- CC-BY = safe if you credit the creator
- CC-BY-SA = safe but annoying
- CC-BY-NC = NOT allowed
- Copyrighted music = NOT allowed
- Always save the license text in your project folder for legal protection
